NAN OF THE NORTHSYNOPSIS:EPISODE NO. 10"A Bolt From The Sky"

Nan, Driscoll and Gaspard, buried by the landslide, are rescued by Vane, Celeste and Peralo, who had seen the avalanche descend upon them. While on the cliff above the hostile Indians are frightened off by the sudden appearance of Igloo, the witch doctor.

Vane and Celeste state that they overheard Hays say that he was bound for the States at once with the vials he possesses, and they argue that all should now join forces to best the outlaws. Nan, Driscoll and Gaspard, possessing the real formula of titano, agree to this, seeing a chance to throw the others off the trail. Vane, Celeste and Peralo start on ahead, but Vane sends back Celeste to join Hays, and if possible, to obtain definite information concerning his plans.

Hays now discovers that the two vials he possesses are faked ones, and is enraged. So when a former Indian ally tells him that Nan and her companions have joined an emigrant train, he consents to join the Indians in a night attack upon it.

But Nan, Driscoll and Gaspard succeed in escaping from the attacked train, and late that night arrive at a trading post.

Driscoll, more determined than ever not to allow Hays to best him, divides the two bottles of titano into a second set, which he places in the safe of the trading post. Hays, who has now arrived, peers in and sees this. The second set of the formula Driscoll keeps in his coat.

A terrific storm has come up. Nan, aroused by a noise below, creeps down to investigate, and is just in time to see Igloo, the witch doctor, taking the two vials from the safe. She grapples with him. Outside, Hays sees the silhouetted form of Driscoll against a window shade and fires upon him. While in the trading post, the fluid from the two bottles of titano, dropped by Igloo when Nan had surprised him, flow together, when a blinding jet of flame shoots up, with both Nan and Igloo sinking to the floor senseless.
